A "BUSY" Telephone is Like a Closed Door—

Your customers can't get in

A business man knows about the busy condition of his present telephone service only when customers start complaining about getting "busies." Others, however, they don't bother—they merely phone their orders elsewhere.

Below are actual examples of busy Westchester firms provided enough telephone entrances to serve present customers and attract new ones.

A printing establishment used its telephone largely in outgoing calls for paper orders, engraving work and submitting estimates. There was no suspicion that incoming calls were being interfered with. However, a couple of orders were lost recently due to the inability of customers to reach the firm. To prevent such loss of business in the future, the proprietor installed a second telephone line.

A small taxi company started business with only one line. The owner soon discovered that, although his outgoing calls were not many, they were sufficient to interfere with requests for cab calls. He realized that this was costing him money and customers. Accordingly, he arranged for a second line to be used for his outgoing calls and any overflow incoming calls, leaving the first line clear at all times to handle customers' telephone orders.

An auto firm had two lines which it was felt served their telephone requirements satisfactorily. A busy check by the company showed that the telephone usage was much heavier than had been thought, so heavy in fact that many incoming calls received "busy" reports. To remedy this condition another line was added at a cost of less than 10 cents a day.

A rug cleaning firm was informed that busy reports were being given on many incoming calls. It also happened that this firm did considerable business in a nearby town where a 10 cent toll charge applied. To relieve the busy condition and also reduce the cost of calls to and from customers in the adjacent town, a direct line from the firm's office to the central office of the nearby town was installed. This not only relieved the busy condition of the lines but allowed customers in the nearby town to call the company for a local call.

If your telephone is in fairly constant use, let us make a check for a few days on the number of "busies" your customers are getting. Then you can see for yourself whether or not you need another line. No obligation—just telephone the Business Office.

I Didn't Know which way to Turn

UNTIL I THOUGHT OF THE TELEPHONE!

"What a day that was!

"A thousand and one things to do. The baby to take care of, a two-hour shopping trip, bridge in the afternoon, and guests coming for dinner.

"Then I thought of the telephone. I could at least try ordering that way. And, do you know, it was a revelation to me."

When you're "just too busy," or the weather is bad, or for some reason you can't go to the stores you'll often save time and trouble by using your telephone. You'll probably be surprised at the wide variety of things you can buy by telephone. Don't put off buying—reach for your telephone.
